

Marco A. Wright

July 8, 1966 - November 25, 2010

Marco Armando Wright was born on July 8, 1966, in Manhattan, New York, USA, to parents Francisco and Pearl Wright. His academic career consisted of a number of private schools, one being the prestigious Cardinal Hayes High School in New York. Although he held many positions, including the New York Transit Authority, Marco's passion was cooking. He was a chef at a number of establishments including The Sheridan Hotel, The Cheesecake Factory, Bonefish Grill, and, most recently, Brus Room. Marco's passion for cooking extended out of professional kitchens and into the homes and hearts of those who knew him. He was always helpful whenever cooking was involved. An example of his helpfulness was at Bethel Worship Center's 2009 Youth Explosion where he single-handedly grilled in his unique way some two hundred hot dogs and hamburgers to feed those who came for fellowship. When asked if he needed help, he said, "No I got this." Today, many of those who ate those delectable burgers and hot dogs are still raving that it was the best they'd ever eaten. Marco is survived by his most prized possession, his son, Corey Armando Wright; his sisters Daisy and Andrea; his niece and nephew LeShon and Tivon; and countless family members and friends. On November 14, 2010, Marco made the most important decision of his life; he accepted Jesus Christ as his Lord and savior. Because of this decision, we know that this is not good-bye, just so long for now, as we shall meet again someday. Today, Marco is with Christ in Paradise.
